PURPOSE

Maintaining a healthy, positive nutritional status is critical for healthy aging, quick and full recovery after acute illnesses, and for successful management of most chronic conditions. Inadequate nutrition is a self-perpetuating problem because it can be both a cause and consequence of poor health and poverty.

This workshop presents and discusses the individual and community impacts from nutrition and disparities in social determinants of health (financial, social, familial, educational, and physical environment) manifested in an individual's unique circumstances.

The recognition of food as medicine is growing toward improving these outcomes, lowering costs, and reducing health inequities within our communities. Ideas will be discussed on how attendees can help to make a positive impact on clients and communities.

PRESENTER

Bryan Petkoff, RD, LD

Bryan is a Registered and Licensed Dietitian in the state of Ohio, so food holds a spot very near and dear to his heart. He earned his Bachelor's degree in Nutrition and Dietetics from the University of Akron, and is Manager of Healthcare Partnerships with Mom's Meals covering its Ohio and Michigan territory. He advocates for at-risk individuals and seniors aging in place to get better quality of life from their chosen home environments.

His previous experience was as Clinical Dietitian for long-term care facilities in the Cleveland area. Bryan supports a "food as medicine" approach to support individuals in need, especially our at-risk seniors.
